Deep penetration of the substrate with a perforated plate; 2. Application of a special PVC compound at the substrate/plastic composite interface; 3. Application of a PVC compound at the interface of the substrate and the perforated plate; 4. Embedding of the perforated plate within the substrate; and 5. Mineral coating of the substrate. The perforated plate allows the resin to flow to the bottom of the substrate. It also allows air to be driven from the top of the plastic to the bottom of the plastic, promoting chemical bonding between the substrate and the plate and ensuring maximum durability of the joint. Vipers have a 12-year life expectancy when used in conjunction with ABS-based products. The Big 3...
